ABSTRACT

This quarterly abstracting journal disseminates bibliographic information on Caribbean planning and development literature available through the Caribbean Information System for Economic and Social Planning (CARISPLAN), a cooperative effort of the Caribbean countries. It provides annotated listings of serial publications, books, and other documents such as reports, conference papers, and feasibility studies that provide information relevant to priority areas outlined by the Caribbean Development and Cooperation Committee. The abstracts are preceded by an introduction to the CARISPLAN system and use of the journal, a CARISPLAN information flow diagram, lists of CARISPLAN national focal points and geographic codes for primary countries, a sample entry, and abbreviations used for participating centers. Abstracts are then grouped into six categories: (1) facts, trends, and analyses (basic information and data, extrapolations and forecasts, and existing situations); (2) prescriptions for decision-making; (3) official policies, plans, programs, and arrangements; (4) development action (specific project studies, new project announcements and descriptions, and operational experience); (5) consequences and evaluation; and (6) resources and tools for development. Citations include the document author(s), location of the document, original language title, distribution, primary country codes, and descriptors. Subject, geographic, author, conference, and symbols indexes are included. The period of coverage is 1970 onwards and the system is restricted to documents written in English, Spanish, French, and Dutch. (LMM)

INTRODUCTION

Background

The Caribbean Information System for Economic and Social Planning (CARISPLAN) was instituted in 1979 by ECLA's Caribbean Documentation Centre in response to a mandate by member governments of the Caribbean Development and Co-operation Committee (CDCC). It is the first sectoral network to be established within the Caribbean Information System.

The First Meeting of Caribbean Planning Officials held in Havana in January 1979 resolved to strengthen the Caribbean Documentation Centre in its efforts to establish CARISPLAN and to link the System with INFOPLAN, the Information System for Planning in Latin America, developed by ECLA's Latin American Centre for Economic and Social Documentation (CLADES).

The objective of CARISPLAN is to facilitate Caribbean development and co-operation activities and to provide a relevant and up-to-date information service to policy-makers, planners of socio-economic development projects and programmes, managers of such projects and programmes, researchers and teachers of development planning, financiers who provide resources and technical assistance, communicators of information about these programmes, and library and information personnel.

CARISPLAN is a co-operative effort of Caribbean countries. The information units of the national planning agencies (or units designated by them) serve as the focal points. It is the responsibility of the national focal point to identify and collect the national literature relevant to the scope of the network, prepare bibliographic and analytic summaries according to an established standard, assign indexing descriptors and organize the documents for easy retrieval. The Caribbean Documentation Centre is responsible for preparing bibliographic records of documents produced by ECLA and documents relating to studies on the Caribbean in general. Caribbean integration agencies and sub-regional

INTRODUCCION

Antecedentes

El Sistema de Información del Caribe para la Planificación Económica y Social (CARISPLAN) fue formado en 1979 por el Centro de Documentación del Caribe de la Comisión Económica para América Latina (CEPAL), respondiendo a un mandato proveniente de los gobiernos miembros del Comité de Desarrollo y Cooperación del Caribe (CDCC). CARISPLAN es la primera red sectorial que se establece en el contexto del Sistema de Información del Caribe.

La Primera Reunión de Funcionarios de Planificación del Caribe organizada en La Habana en enero de 1979, resolvió fortalecer el Centro de Documentación del Caribe en lo que respecta el establecimiento de CARISPLAN, y vincular el sistema con INFOPLAN, el Sistema de Información para la Planificación en América Latina, desarrollado por el Centro Latinoamericano de Documentación Económica y Social (CLADES) que pertenece a CEPAL.

El objetivo de CARISPLAN es el de apoyar las actividades de desarrollo y cooperación del Caribe, y de proporcionar un servicio de información relevante y actualizada a los ejecutivos de gobierno, planificadores de proyectos y programas de desarrollo económico, administradores de tales proyectos y programas, investigadores y profesores de planificación del desarrollo, financistas que proporcionan recursos y asistencia técnica, difusores de información acerca de estos programas, y personal de bibliotecas y centros de información.

CARISPLAN es un esfuerzo de cooperación de los países del Caribe. Las unidades de información de las agencias nacionales de planificación (o aquellas unidades designadas por estas últimas) constituyen los puntos focales. El punto focal nacional es responsable por la identificación y recolección de la literatura nacional relevante al alcance de la red de información, la preparación de bibliografías y resúmenes analíticos de acuerdo a estándares previamente establecidos, asignación de descriptores de índices, y la organización de documentos para su búsqueda más expedita. El Centro de Documentación del Caribe es responsable por bodies such as CARICOM, CDB, ECCM, WISA, research institutes specializing in Caribbean problems and international agencies operating in CDCC countries, are expected to participate in the System and to input bibliographic records relating to information which they themselves produce.

The bibliographic records of all participating centres are sent to the Caribbean Documentation Centre. The Computer output is produced by CLADES and from this CARISPLAN Abstracts is printed.

The Caribbean Documentation Centre received financial assistance from the International Development Research Centre (IDRC) to enable it to provide training and advisory services which would ensure the active participation of national centres and to produce CARISPLAN Abstracts.

CARISPLAN Abstracts is a quarterly abstracting journal designed to disseminate bibliographic information on Caribbean planning and development literature as provided by participating centres. The journal helps the user to identify existing documentation and to appraise the value of available literature and its relevance to his/her area of interest. It further helps the user to understand the present status and trends in Caribbean socio-economic development and the implication of these trends for the future. It makes a much wider range of resources available to anyone of the information components in the System. The Caribbean Documentation Centre provides a free document delivery service to Caribbean government institutions and regional organizations.

Scope

The scope of the journal is flexible, since planning is mission-oriented and draws on all sectors of economic and social activity. Publications are included if they provide information relevant to the priority areas outlined by the CDCC for development and co-operation activities. National participating centres enter the national literature which they consider relevant to the furtherance of their country's economic and social development.

la preparación de archivos bibliográficos de documentos producidos por CEPAL, y otros documentos relacionados con estudios sobre el Caribe en general. Se espera que participen en el Sistema las agencias de integración del Caribe y algunos otros organismos subregionales, tales como: CARICOM, CDB, ECCM, WISA, OECS, los institutos de investigación especializados en problemas del Caribe y las agencias internacionales que operan en los países del CDCC. También se espera que estas instituciones contribuyan con insumos de registros bibliográficos relacionados con la información producida por ellos mismos.

Los registros bibliográficos de todos los centros participantes son enviados al Centro de Documentación del Caribe. CLADES produce un resultado computarizado que se usa para publicar los Resúmenes de CARISPLAN.

El Centro de Documentación del Caribe recibió ayuda financiera del Centro Internacional de Investigación del Desarrollo (IDRC) que le permitió proporcionar entrenamiento y servicios de asesoría que permitirían asegurar la participación activa de los centros nacionales, así como también, la publicación de los Resúmenes de CARISPLAN.

Los Resúmenes de CARISPLAN es una publicación de resúmenes bibliográficos quatrimestral diseñada para diseminar información bibliográfica acerca de la planificación en el Caribe y literatura sobre el desarrollo que son proporcionadas por los centros participantes. La publicación ayuda al usuario a identificar los documentos existentes y a evaluar la literatura disponible y su relevancia con respecto a su área de interés. Aún más, ayuda al usuario a entender el estado actual y las tendencias del desarrollo socioeconómico del Caribe y las implicaciones de dichas tendencias para el futuro. Hace disponible a cualquiera un rango mucho más amplio de recursos de los componentes de información del Sistema. El Centro de Documentación del Caribe proporciona un servicio de entrega de documentos sin cargo alguno a instituciones de gobierno del Caribe y a organizaciones regionales.

Alcance

El alcance de Resúmenes de CARISPLAN es flexible, puesto que la planificación está orientada a tareas específicas y cubre todos los sectores de actividad eco-

Included in the System are serial publications, books and non-conventional, less widely distributed, documents such as reports, conference papers, feasibility studies, etc., which relate to the planning activity in the Caribbean. Special emphasis is placed on the latter since these unpublished documents are not commercially available and are often of value to other users of the System.

The period of coverage is 1970 onwards with priority being given to the most current material. Earlier literature of special importance may be included.

At present, the System restricts itself to documents written in English, Spanish, French and Dutch - the four official languages of the CDCC member states. Participating centres prepare input sheets for their national literature with abstracts of the documents written in the language of their country. Participating centres in Suriname do not prepare abstracts for entries until the OECD Macrothesaurus is translated into Dutch. Original language titles are retained.

CARISPLAN Abstracts is structured to capture the documents generated by its target audience and the Caribbean documents which they are likely to use in the course of their planning and development activities. Such supporting information is primarily produced by or for the national statistical offices, central banks, ministries which feed the planners with the necessary sectoral data, departmental planning offices, universities and research institutes and some private organizations. Since the system works towards control of the literature at the institutional level, it is expected that CARISPLAN Abstracts will represent a fairly complete coverage of the type of literature which it aspires to capture.

Arrangement of CARISPLAN Abstracts

There are approaches to finding material in CARISPLAN Abstracts - the Bibliographic Index, Subject Index (in English, Spanish and French), Geographic Index (in English, Spanish and French), Author Index (personal and corporate) and a Conference Index.

nómica y social. Se incluyen las publicaciones que proporcionan información relevante a las áreas prioritarias que han sido identificadas por el CDCC para las actividades de cooperación y desarrollo. Los centros nacionales que participan, incorporan la literatura que ellos consideran relevante al proceso de desarrollo económico y social de sus respectivos países.

Se incluyen en el Sistema otras publicaciones que están relacionadas con la actividad de planificación en el Caribe, tales como: publicaciones periódicas, libros y material no-convencional, material de distribución menos amplia, informes, documentos de conferencias, estudios de factibilidad, etc. Se ha puesto un énfasis especial en estos últimos, puesto que son documentos que no se publican y que no se encuentran disponibles en el mercado pero que a menudo son de utilidad para otros usuarios del Sistema.

El período de cobertura es desde 1970 hacia adelante, dándosele prioridad al material más reciente. También puede ser incluida literatura anterior de importancia especial.

Por el momento, el Sistema está restringido a documentos escritos en inglés, español, francés y holandés, que son los cuatro idiomas oficiales de los estados miembros del CDCC. Los centros que participan preparan las hojas de insumos para su literatura nacional con resúmenes de los documentos escritos en el idioma de su respectivo país. Los centros que participan de Suriname no preparan resúmenes para los documentos presentados, sino que presentan descriptores temáticos en inglés para tales documentos hasta que se traduzca en holandés el Macrotesauro de la OECD. Los títulos de los documentos se dejan en su idioma original.

Los Resúmenes de CARISPLAN se estructuran de manera tal que puedan capturarse los documentos que se originan en la comunidad a la cual se dirigen, así como también, los documentos del Caribe que con mayor probabilidad serán usados en el curso de las actividades de planificación y desarrollo. Dicha información de apoyo es producida, fundamentalmente, por o para oficinas nacionales de estadísticas, bancos centrales, y ministerios que proporcionan la información sectorial necesaria a los pla-

The main entries which appear in the Bibliographic Index are prepared in accordance with rules outlined in the:

CARISPLAN Manual of Indexing Procedures,

CARISPLAN Abstracting Manual and

CARISPLAN Manual for the Use of the Bibliographic Record Card[1]

The sample entry on page (xii) indicates the elements in the record format. The records are organized according to the DEVSIS categories[2] which represent the purpose for which the document was written. Many of CARISPLAN's users will need to better understand the present status and trends in the economies and societies for which they take decisions and draw up plans. The bibliographic file is therefore arranged to facilitate the identification and extraction of basic information on current situations and their extrapolations into the future.

Again, many users will be seeking access to information on programmes and projects closely related to those on which they are working, in order to be able to benefit from the experience of others and to effect co-ordination of efforts. CARISPLAN Abstracts is therefore arranged to ensure rapid identification of material on plans, programmes and projects.

Those who wish digested background information on major trends in development theory and experience can easily locate this information and the alternative sources from which it can be obtained.

Subject Index. The subject index is presented in English, Spanish and French. Each subject descriptor shows the principal country, the abstract number, the title in the original language. In the Spanish and French nificadores, oficinas departamentales de planificación, universidades, institutos de investigación y algunas organizaciones privadas. Puesto que el Sistema está orientado hacia el control de la literatura al nivel institucional, se espera que los Resúmenes de CARISPLAN representarán una cobertura más o menos completa del tipo de literatura que aspira capturar.

Organización de los Resúmenes de CARISPLAN

Existen varios enfoques para la búsqueda de material en los Resúmenes de CARISPLAN, estos son: el Indice Bibliográfico, el Indice Temático (en inglés, español y francés), el Indice Geográfico (en inglés, español y francés), el Indice de Autores (Individual e Instituciones), y un Indice de Conferencias.

Los ingresos principales que aparecen en el Indice Bibliográfico son preparados de acuerdo con las reglas que se presentan en los siguientes documentos:

Manual de Procedimientos de Indización de CARISPLAN,

Manual de Resúmenes de CARISPLAN, y

Manual para el Uso de la Tarjeta de Registro Bibliográfico de CARISPLAN[1]

La muestra de ingreso que aparece en página (xiii) indica los diferentes elementos en el formato del archivo. Los registros están organizados de acuerdo a las categorías DEVSIS[2] que representan el propósito para el cual el documento fue escrito. La mayoría de los usuarios de CARISPLAN necesitarán de una mejor comprensión del estado actual y las tendencias de las economías y sociedades para las cuales ellos toman decisiones y formulan programas y planes. El archivo bibliográfico se organiza de manera de facilitar la identificación y extracción de información básica sobre las situaciones actuales y sus extrapolaciones en el futuro.

Del mismo modo, muchos otros usuarios buscarán información acerca de programas y proyectos que se relacionan indexes, the English title is followed by a Spanish translation.

The third edition of OECD Macrothesaurus is the controlled vocabulary used for indexing and retrieval of information in CARISPLAN. The Macrothesaurus provides a language which can process information relating to all aspects of social and economic development. This helps to ensure compatibility in a decentralized system such as CARISPLAN. The indexer attempts to ensure that the descriptors selected express, as specifically as possible, the concepts identified in the document.

Geographic Index. Each entry gives the DEVSIS category, the abstract number and the title of the document which deals with the country or region.

Author Index: This index includes personal as well as institutional authors, editors or collaborators. Each entry provides the abstract number of the document quoted in the main bibliographic file and title in the original language followed by a translation in Spanish or English.

Conference Index: Conferences are arranged alphabetically by their names and the abstract number indicated.

estrechamente con aquellos en los cuales están trabajando, con el objeto de obtener beneficios provenientes de la experiencia de otros, como asimismo hacer efectiva una mayor cooperación de esfuerzos. Los Resúmenes de CARISPLAN están organizados de manera tal que se puede obtener de forma rápida la identificación de material acerca de planes, programas y proyectos de desarrollo.

Aquellas personas que deseen información general, previamente analizada, acerca de los aspectos principales de la teoría y práctica del desarrollo pueden localizar fácilmente esta información y las fuentes alternativas donde puede encontrarse.

Indice Temático. El índice temático se presenta en inglés, español y francés. Cada descriptor de tema muestra el país principal, el número de resumen, y el título de la publicación en su idioma original. En los índices en español y francés, el título en inglés de la publicación va acompañado de una traducción del mismo en español.

La tercera edición del Macrotesauro de la OECD es el vocabulario controlado que se usa para la indización y búsqueda de la información en el sistema CARISPLAN. El Macrotesauro proporciona un lenguaje que permite procesar información que se relaciona con todos los aspectos del desarrollo económico y social. Esto ayuda a confirmar la compatibilidad en un sistema descentralizado como CARISPLAN. La persona que confecciona el índice intenta asegurarse que los descriptores seleccionados expresen, de la manera más específica posible, los conceptos que se identifican en cada documento.

Indice Geográfico: Cada ingreso proporciona la categoría DEVSIS, el número del resumen y el título del documento que se refiere a un país o región.

Indice de Autores: Este índice incluye autores individuales, así como también instituciones, editores o colaboradores. Cada ingreso proporciona el número del resumen del documento que se cita en el archivo bibliográfico principal, y el título en el idioma original seguida por una traducción en español o inglés.

Indice de Conferencias: Las conferencias están organizadas en un orden alfabético, indicándose su nombre y el número del resumen.

La causa mas significativa de la ineficiencia de muchas empresas productivas es la ausencia de integracion de los elementos que intervienen en el proceso de la empresa. Los metodos que se han desarrollado que tratan de resolver la ineficiencia se basan en la integracion de la direccion. Los sistemas integrados de direccion se apoyan en tres conceptos: sistema, integracion y direccion. Se explican los conceptos de sistema, enfoque de sistemas y de integracion. Se analiza el objetivo de los sistemas para la toma de decisiones basados en las computadoras.

Prepared for the Tenth West Indies Agricultural Economics Conference in Association with the Caribbean Food and Nutrition Institute. Technical Group meeting, 6-12 April, 1975.

General (01597)

Discusses the marketing arrangements for beef and analyses the demand for beef in Guyana. Provides a comprehensive range of statistics relating to the population growth, the percentage disappearance of various types of meat, the prices of meat and other related economic variables, as well as some social customs, all of which contribute to the low per capita consumption of meat and inadequate protein intake of a high percentage of the population. Outlines some policy implications apparent from this demand study. Attempts to give some projection figures for beef demand and suggests there is a need for an estimation of price elasticity of demand for beef.

General (01561)

A demographic study which analyses population growth, population distribution and internal migration, population composition, labour, fertility and mating. Immigration was identified as the main component of population growth up to the end of the last century. Since 1921 increases have been due mainly to an increase in birth rate and a decrease in deaths. Population increase from 73,000 in 1844 to 940,700 in 1979 is noted. Projections indicate that if the fertility decline observed in 1960-70 continues the population would be smaller at the end of this century than if no further decline occurs. Diagrams and tables are included.

Limited (01468)

Aims to examine the relationships between economic growth and the changing pattern of imports, highlighting the contrary tendency in Barbados - to use proportionately more imports as the economy grows. Section I begins with a survey of the pattern of growth in imports and moves on to a detailed analysis of the determinants of import patterns done by means of regression analysis presented in the Appendix. Section II is an evaluation of results in the light of economic developments in the past 20 years with findings summed up in the conclusion in a section of charts and tables of real retained imports broken down by consumer goods, intermediate and capital goods and percentage distribution.

Reputation and ranking in a Barbadian locality. (Reputacion y categoria en un barrio de Barbados). Social and Economic Studies (Kingston), 25 (2): 106-121, Jun. 1976. 17 refs.
General (01775)

Analyses the internal ranking system of a lower-class Barbadian suburb and suggests that sociological models of stratification based primarily on criteria of class and status are inadequate for an analysis of the internal differentiation and ranking of a small-scale locality. The method of participant observation is used to investigate the criteria for self-placement in the local hierarchy. Identifies the idiom of respect as the key concept according to which individuals judge each other: categories and values of respect and behaviour provide the raw data for a model which is then applied to an analysis of social relationships and ranking. Findings throw light on the characteristics of the local ranking system and the conclusion drawn is that each individual ranks the other differently in relation to himself and according to the nature of his respect for that person. Thus the single structured hierarchy endemic in anthropological studies distorts the complexities and ambiguities of ranking in a small-scale locality where interactional criteria of behavioural patterns often count as much in ranking as material attributes.

Development and prospects of the Cuban economy. (Desarrollo y perspectivas de la economia cubana). La Habana, 1979. 108 p. ilus., tbls., maps., charts Spanish edition in possession.
General (01781)

Describes general geographic, demographic, economic and administrative characteristics of Cuba and reviews socio-economic developments during the period 1970-74. During this period the global social product, measured in current internal prices, underwent an average annual growth of 12%. The average annual growth of total material production was 8%. Industry and construction were the major contributors to sectoral development. The overall economic growth is attributed to an increase in efficiency in the use of human resources to greater utilization of productive capacities, and to a better general organization in production. Among the more important projects of the investment programme for the next few years are: the renovation and modernization of the sugar industry, the further development of nickel production; the creation of new productive capacity in nitrogen fertilizers, tyres and other important intermediate goods; and reconstruction and expansion of the national railway network and the principal ports. As far as the evolution of the external sector is concerned, Soviet Union aid through credit and favourable agreed prices for Cuban export, has made possible the availability of necessary supplies for the development of the Cuban economy. Other chapters outline the more specific developments in foreign trade, agriculture, sugar, industry, fishing, transport and communications, construction, social services and popular consumption.

The article touches briefly on the history of the island and its relations with the US and focuses on the economic growth which has taken place with the US and during the presidency of Joaquin Balaguer spurred on by US aid. Problems still beset economic and social development: racial inequality, power and water shortages, malnutrition, illiteracy and unemployment. The booms and slumps of the main economic sectors-sugar, coffee, mining and tourism -are presented through the eyes of Dominican workers and businessmen. The article concludes that "Dominican people seem willing to let Balaguer carry the load, to wait like children for their president to deal with their considerable problems and tell them what to do".

An investigation is made into the historically constituted specificity of the Haitian society and a formulation of the logic of its evolution is presented. The peculiar class structure during the era of enslavement, class conflicts and their sucessive solutions during the nineteenth century are described. The mechanism of the peasant society which was forged as a result of these processes is examined as well as its compatibility with international developments. With culture being defined as the set of social instruments of perception and action, it is argued that the enslaved created during the eighteenth century an oppressed culture striving for self-expression against the obstacles formulated within the creole culture by the locally dominant groups. A theory and definition of oppressed cultures are proposed and it is submitted that far from being unique to Haiti, similar forms of oppression characterize the whole of Latin america. The study concludes with an analysis of the class structure in twentieth century Haiti after a description of its political practices as well as those of the United States of America.

Colonialism and the myth of resource insufficiency in Jamaica. (Colonialismo y el mito de la insuficiencia de recursos en Jamaica). In: Lewis, V.A.. Size, self-determination and international relations: the Caribbean. Kingston, UWI. Institute of Social and Economic Research, 1976. 64 refs.
General (01612)

Discusses some of the ways British imperialists used the myths of insufficient resources and small size to hinder the socio-economic and political growth of Jamaica, taking the fortunes of sugar to illustrate his thesis. Starts by showing that belief in these myths has led Jamaicans to become dependent on outside help to solve their problems and goes on to explode the myth of the benevolent mother country freeing the slaves when the facts show that sugar was no longer economical and slaves too expensive. Exploitation is seen in there being no attempt to develop another viable crop for Jamaica. The people were never given a decision-making voice in their affairs but were led to believe that sugar was their only crop and that Britain offered the best price for the commodity. Declares that sugar financed the industrial revolution which financed new end economical products to be purchased by Jamaica and other colonies; that Britain encouraged the belief that using foreign manufacturers was the hall-mark of success, to ensure a captive market for her manufactures and a constant supply of raw materials so no attempts were made to develop local industries.

Regards preferential prices for Jamaican goods, given as largesse to a mendicant as another myth, for only the British benefited as often the commodities were sold below world market prices. Questions the suitability for Jamaica of the Westminster model which gives only the symbol of power to the political leaders leaving the economy in the hands of the elite, making democratic government an illusion. Asserts that Jamaica needs a system of government which will unite the people and make them aware of their potential for development. Concludes that all these myths constitute one of the chief factors responsible for the persistent poverty in all facets of socio-cultural and political life of Jamaica.

Summarises the problems entailed in Jamaica's attempt to improve her position vis-a-vis the transnational aluminium corporations. The Bauxite Production Levy created problems because the transnationals had other sources of bauxite, there was price under-cutting, the International Bauxite Association was not united. Jamaica failed in her attempts at collaboration with Third World countries to produce aluminium because of wariness, high costs, vacillation of the energy rich countries. Concludes that the energy problem will be a continuing deterrent because: there will be little foreign exchange for aluminium; Jamaica cannot afford her own smelter; increasing oil cost is lessening the competitiveness of her alumina; Australia with cheap coal will be increasing her output. Transnational linking up with oil producers will aggravate the situation.

Problems at Port of Spain General Hospital, the San Fernando General and the St. Ann's Psychiatric Hospital are very similar: services for staff, such as laundry, meals, hostel, are poor or non-existent; security absent; equipment malfunctioning or absent; understaffing; poor bleep and telephone communications; and poor sanitation. At San Fernando the high rents paid by doctors in the private sector are under attack as is the poor job performance of wardsmaids and attendants. Laid before the House of Representatives 5 December 1980.

In 1978 Cabinet instructed the Ministry of Agriculture to conduct a survey in order to quantify the extent, location and socio-economic conditions of squatters. The survey was solely on residential squatters on state lands and the report is therefore not authoritative in some respects. Information was collected on average monthly expenditure; year of construction of house; and nationality and type of resident status. The survey located 7,597 buildings in 106 areas in Trinidad, with the rider that not all populations were surveyed, only the major ones. There are no recognisable groups of squatters in Tobago. The majority were in county St. George, the smallest number in Nariva/Mayaro. The educational levels of the squatters are significantly lower than that of the national population; the average monthly income in 1977 was $784.48, but this figure is derived from a population where the smallest income enumerated was less than $500 and the greatest more than $1700. Squatters gave as reasons for squatting, chiefly: low and irregular income; high rents; high land prices.

Parliament and the scrutiny of science policy in Trinidad and Tobago: the case of natural gas. (Parlamento y la examinacion de la politica cientifica en Trinidad y Tobago: el caso de gas natural). Port of Spain, 1980. 22 p. Presented to: CPA Study Group on "Parliament and the Scrutiny of Science Policy", Ottawa, CA, 24-27 Nov. 1980. 24 refs.

Limited (01543)

Discusses the thesis that the Parliament of Trinidad and Tobago is little involved in the formulation of public policy. As a test case, the author cites the development of a natural gas policy. Full scale exploitation of natural gas began in the mid-1970's with the discovery of reserves at a level that would promote industrialisation on a comprehensive scale. In deciding on a programme Parliament's role was reduced to receiving status reports. Policies were announced in Ministerial statements rather than in a Throne speech: the latter can be debated but the former cannot, according to the Standing Orders. A consequence is that Parliament has little control over Government activities.

The committee found that the Nelson fire had damaged five Subscriber Link Cards, one of which was completely destroyed. At the Thompson Exchange, damage was small, to one Path Selection Relay Card. On evaluation, it was judged that, although the causes of the fires were not readily determinable, an external source, such as arson, was improbable, and that a component failure the likeliest cause. The installation of sensors is recommended; and tests to evaluate the materials used in the equipment and verification of original component specifications were carried out.

General (01750)

Examines early trade union development in Trinidad, how it was affected by external influences and the extent to which Trinidad workers as part of the then British Caribbean working class, influenced the evolution of British imperial Labour policy in the late 80's and early 40's. The role of the British labour Party and A.A. Cipriani in fostering and maintaining responsible trade unionism and political reformism, is discussed. By 1930 the communist threat to the British Empire warranted some concern on the part of the Labour Government towards the development of healthy and responsible unionism in the colonies. But it was only the eruption of labour unrest in the late 1930's that liberalized trade union legislation was passed. The Butler Riots and the emergence of a political trade unionism in Trinidad is seen as situated within the wider context of British imperialism: the recognition by British Capital that "peaceful relations were largely the result of strong and firmly established trade unionism", and the fact that both imperial and colonial labour aristocracies benefitted from the continuation of imperialism.

General (01337)

Defines the nature and characteristics of inflation and its effects on the economies of Barbados, Guyana, Jamaica and Trinidad and Tobago. Reveals that the inflation syndrome in the Commonwealth Caribbean had its beginnings in the middle 1960's, but accelerated during the first half of the 1970's. The events which triggered off the inflationary spirals were global in nature, namely unfavourable weather conditions in Russia, Guyana and the Indian sub-continent and the Arab oil embargo. Identifies the major contributor as the food and drink sub-group; the main cause as the lack of development in the agricultural sector.

Analyses the labour situation in the Caribbean especially employment, unemployment and underutilization of human resources mainly from 1960-1976. Briefly reviews the economic history within the expansion of world capitalist system, the lack of data for a thorough analysis of the situation is noted. Unemployment is seen as fixed at one-quarter to one-third of the regional work age population for most of the Caribbean, tending to be highest among, the 25-40 age group. Education is seen as a most important variable in employment, for training is not geared to employment opportunities. The movement away from the traditional agricultural sector to modern industry, mining and petroleum is viewed as the cause of problems for the modern sector has few job opportunities. Tourism and its minimal contribution to human resource development is examined. Labour force statistics by sectors, age groups are presented. The brain-drain as well as migration of non-skilled labour, stratification based on colour in relation to labour are reviewed. The study criticized theories of labour based on issues outlined and recommends long-term, large-scale planning.

The Caribbean is less advanced in import substitution than the countries of Asia and Latin America. Money costs of production are too high in relation to world prices, or, West Indian currencies are overvalued; investment is small and unemployment rises. Devaluation would be a solution but must be accompanied by control of money costs. Imports should be reduced so that, over time, the level of imports does not rise as fast as national income; in addition, the level of exports must grow. Deficiencies in productivity are those of training, organization and capital. Overall, the Caribbean's economic policies lack measures to reconcile its money costs with international prices, such as statutory control of prices and wages.

Post-graduate training in the social sciences in the English-speaking Caribbean: an overview. (Capacitacion de estudiantes licenciados en las ciencias sociales en el Caribe anglofono; una resena). 1979. 13 p. 6 refs.
General (01705)

Assesses the present state of post-graduate training and identifies the problems hindering its development. Decries the apathy of Caribbean society toward the Social Sciences and their usefulness in solving some of its problems, an attitude evident even at the university; reviews the history of post-graduate training showing that for the period 1963-1975 only four degrees per year were granted, possibly fewer since then. Suggests that the programme had been designed to meet faculty needs and states that few graduates had gone beyond the Master of Science level. Uses facilities, graduate faculty, record of the graduate department and the calibre of graduate students as the criteria for judging a good graduate programme and observes that the university is deficient in all. Physical facilities -access to a good library, specialised reading room, adequate study and research space and equipment- are problematic; non-physical facilities -adequate expert staff- are limited; there has been no outstanding record of success among students in the Social Science Faculty; few good students have been motivated to pursue graduate education though scholarships and other forms of financial assistance can be had. Concludes that if these conditions are adequately met the programme would develop since there is need for Social Sciences in the region and dependence on foreign expertise is undesirable. Observes that funding could be difficult since the programme has political implications. Points out that the programme should be integrated with the Institute of Social and Economic Research because the raison-d'etre of post-graduate training is research, which should be oriented to regional needs. When contributing governments accept the interrelatedness of social science and the needs of society, support for post-graduate programmes will be had.

Describes briefly the present manpower -education situation reffering to historical background. Notes the low level of development of manpower and human resources as an obstacle to economic and social development- 15-25% of labour force in the Commonwealth Caribbean is unemployed. Looks at education, and economic activity showing that labour force participation is associated with changes in education. In 1971 in Trinidad and Tobago the rate of unemployment for persons with little or no education was only 4%. States that the "general" economic approach is that expenditure on education should be treated as "investment in manpower". Notes the need for studies aimed at understanding the attitudes and aspirations of the population towards education, employment and economic development.

Analyses the dichotomy in education between developing and developed countries focusing on illiteracy and the lack of universal primary education in developing countries. In 1970 illiteracy tables show 1.5% and 3.6% for N. America and Europe respectively and 23.6% and 73.7% for Latin America and Africa respectively. Reviews the problems of scope and purpose, examination structure, curriculum irrelevance and inadequacy, size and emphasis on research at the expense of teaching, co-education, racism, and the introduction of free universities and open admission within the university system in the developed countries, concludes that the costs of the education system militate against narrowing the gap between developing and developed countries; population growth, the brain drain and the lack of substancial foreign aid will worsen the adverse balance. Stresses on the racial bias existing in developed countries and questions whether developing countries can afford to devote their resources to institutions of higher education in the face of problems relating to health, population control, food, energy, literacy and unemployment.

Examines the transnational character of banks and illustrates that multinational banks formed an integral part of the early imperialist process and presently, of the modern capitalist phase of the internationalization of production. Argues that the wide discrepancy between the private earnings and benefits enjoyed by the multinational banks resulting from their pattern of operation and, the social benefits accruing to the periphery economy, is indicative of the role of the banks in underdevelopment. A number of countries have devised strategies to offset the social and economic consequences of the operations of these banks; these strategies which are largely ineffective, include: instructions to the banks to limit their scale of operation in specific areas, introduction of state banks, the forcing of multinationals to offer shares to the local population and, various methods of nationalization.

It examines the family organization, economic features, household structure, family group roles and norms, kinship and marriage patterns, and relations with the wider Guyanese society. Concludes that the villages are neither self-contained economic units nor units of production for society, but sources of labour for small scale farmers. Although the nuclear family is the norm in the wider society, variations like the female-headed household result from the strength of mother-child relationship and the relative weakness of the conjugal bond.

Provides information about the history and source of tar that has periodically appeared on the east coast beaches of Trinidad. Research confirms that it is not a recent phenomenon, but dates back to 1797, long before the east coast offshore petroleum industry was developed. Two possible sources are identified: naturally - occuring seepages off the east coast and natural seepages occuring elsewhere which drift to the east coast on sea currents. Results from tar analysis show that tar found on these beaches bears no resemblance to the crude oil produced from off-shore fields. Other tests found a resemblance to bacterially-altered crude, which suggests natural seepage.

Outlines the objectives of the Soil Conservation Scheme; discusses the problems involved, viz., the effects of springwater and precipitous rainfall, chemical soil and oil, poor agronomic techniques and over-grazing, faulty siting of villages, bad siting of roads and water mains. Recommends a comprehensive feasibility study, heavy capital injection for completion of major conservation work and close co-operation between the public and private sectors in work on the project.

Describes for the benefit of farmers and laymen a wide range of pests including destructive insects, weeds, monkeys, birds, rodents and nematodes. Shows their harmful effects on man through crop destruction, loss of production and disease communication. Advises on the best measures -biological, chemical and other- for pest control and on the safety precautions necessary for safeguarding man from the effects of pesticides. Conversion tables of useful measures together with lists of major pests, recommended pesticides and application procedures are included.

ID/WG.323/26

Limited (01392)

Briefly discusses aspects of the Cuban furniture industry, namely, the raw material situation, structure, industrial infrastructure and design. Due to the large-scale felling of the country's forests between 1947 to 1959, wood is generally imported for the furniture industry. Particle board produced from bagasse is used to make boxes, drawers, mattress, supports and some pieces of school furniture, handles, plastic liners and pegs, hardware items, fittings and adhesives for furniture are also produced locally. A breakdown of the composition of production for Cuba's nine furniture enterprises, is presented. The main measures which need to be taken with respect to the development of the industry are:re-forestation; the creation of new particle board industries; and the establishment of a Furniture Technological Institute.

General (01772)

Women make up 40% of the Cuban population - assuming that the task ahead is the full integration of women into the revolutionary effort to create the material and social foundations of communism, the paper examines changes that have taken place in women's participation in the labour force since the revolution. Women's education and employment in pre-and revolutionary Cuba are compared: while the goals of education have been largely successful, women's participation in the labour force has not been without contradictions. Biological determinism continues to underlie the reasoning which justifies the reinforcement of a sexual division of labour and women's domestic obligations -the "second shift"- which are responsible for the high drop-out rate of women workers and the under-representation of women in the leadership ranks. The contradictions undermining the collectivization of household tasks in the public sector and the recent national campaign against sexism are discussed and it is concluded that the degree to which these are resolved will be the measure of Cuba's success in achieving a truly liberated society.

Informe. (Report). 1977. 37 p.
Chairman: W.A. Date.
General (01743)

The Commission was appointed to examine and investigate all aspects of the Grenada Electricity Service operations: the financial operations of the Grenada Electricity Services Ltd. (GLENEC); staffing and labour relations, rate structure, the location of administrative control of the company and its effect on labour relations within the company and on the costs of electricity to consumers, complaints received against the company related to rising charges for electricity, the emphasis on profit-making, comparative salaries and allowances for expatriate and local workers, and the slow progress made in electrification of the country. The Commission finds the company's accounts to be well-kept and that average profits and dividends over the period 1967-76 to be moderate. There is no justification for reducing the number of persons employed by the company, and salaries paid to local workers are on par with those paid in the country. There is no evidence that labour relations are exacerbated by the external administrative control of the company. The Commission recommends, inter alia, the immediate establishment of a Public Utilities Commission, the speeding up of the training of West Indians to take over top management and professional posts from expatriates and the reduction of charges for services by the Company's Regional and Head Offices.

Supports Alan Adamson in his observation that the genuine struggle for a co-operative society started with the emancipation of the African slaves and was strengthened when Indo-Guyanese were free to settle off the plantations, but was frustrated by the colonial government's efforts at organizing viable co-operative institutions and subsequent introduction of the Rochdale system of co-operation. Examines energy consumption in Haiti and reveals that commercial energy requirements are met by imported oil and gas and from 1972 by some indigenous hydroelectricity. Other sources of energy extensively used, firewood, charcoal, bagasse, etc. are however not usually classified as commercial energy. With respect to conventional energy Haiti possesses some lignite deposits the extent and quality of which are unknown; there is some indication that there may be petroleum deposits but no comprehensive data exist. States that non-conventional energy resources of solar and hydro power and biomass possess some potential.

Presented to: Caribbean Seminar on Science and Technology Policy and Planning, 3, Santo Domingo, DO, 26-30 Sep. 1977.

General (01399)

Describes energy consumption in Jamaica, and reveals that the largest consumer of energy is the bauxite industry which accounts for about 50% of total energy consumption. Public electrical energy generation and consumption account for about 15%, transportation 10% and the other sectors the remainder. With respect to conventional energy sources it would appear that Jamaica's potential is quite low, while to the non-conventional sources, future action should be devoted to the development of solar, wind, hydraulic and biomass energy resources, recommends in the medium term that surveys be undertaken with respect to consumption by sector, locality and type and energy resources, and in the long term, suggests that large scale electrical power be generated from solar energy and ocean thermal gradients.

Measures for transfering technology to Jamaica. (Mecanismos para la transmision de tecnologia a Jamaica). Jamaica Journal 9 (2-3): 69-73, 83, 1975. chart., diag., illus., photos 16 refs.

Outlines the need for expanding industry through Research and Development (R D) in Jamaica and suggests strategies for the greatest use at the lowest cost. RD should be government funded in the main and should draw on imported technology through transfer agents -research organizations which would be responsible for selecting and adapting technology. This would be best achieved through direct interaction between the foreign technologist and the transfer agent. The creation of a data bank which would facilitate the evaluation, selection and dissemination of technical information is recommended. The possibility of co-operation among Caricom members in industrializing the region is explored. The effects of pollution resulting from heavy industry on a country like Jamaica are considered. Concludes by stating the need for 1) a national policy on technology which must be related to an international one and which should emphasize development of Jamaica's primary industries, 2) skilled and professional training and 3) the co-operation among all sectors in organizing technology transfer.

Reports the findings of a survey of training programmes in post-secondary institutions 1977-1979, carried out with the objectives of providing up-to-date information for evaluating the training sector, facilitating development of necessary training guidelines and developing a reliable manpower information system. The information was gathered through a questionnaire designed to reveal what institutions charged fees or offered allowances; what problems existed; what the programmes of instruction were; how many instructors were employed; length of the programmes; level of training; total hours of instruction; were tracer studies carried out; what problems existed. 121 of 127 Tertiary, Vocational training, Business Commercial, Upgrading/In-Service institutions participated. The survey identified 705 programmes in 33 subject areas. Tertiary institutions had most graduates; Vocational training and Business Commercial, were next. Few institutions offered programmes lasting more than four years, most were one to three years long. Certificates, diplomas, degrees, were earned at the end of the programmes. Many institutions had difficulty recruiting staff. Much less than 50% had fee-paying students, while more than 70% offered some allowances. Less than half carried out tracer studies. More than 90% had problems -getting supplies was the most endemic. For most institutions this problem and lack of equipment limited the effectiveness of the programmes. Weaknesses highlighted were: poor record keeping, inability to make projections of enrolment, lack of structured curricula in many instances, all pointing to the need for closer monitoring of these institutions. Concludes that where shortages exist, increase in numbers of graduates is good, but not otherwise. Long term programmes suggest in-depth teaching; giving financial assistance, carrying out tracer studies getting supplies and equipment. Includes questionnaire as well as appendices listing participating institutions and describing in detail the subject areas and the courses offered in each.

General (01706)

Examines the performance of the Particle board industry from its inception as Standard Building Products Ltd., in operating co967, reviewing the present situation, the raw material position, giving market and investment analyses and recommending a plan of action for the new management, Jamaica particle Board Co. Ltd. Except in 1976, the plant has not been economically successful because of lack of local expertise in repair and maintenance of machinery, labour disputes, high fuel costs as the plant is virtually automated. Operation was seasonal dependent on the sugar-grinding period. The product was heavily protected, therefore expensive; yet its quality was poor, which caused consumer resistance. These developments contributed to constant change of management, increasing debt and eventual closure. Despite all this there is a good market for particle board if the quality improves. Present refinancing arrangements are commendable but an improvement in the cash flow will be necessary before the plant can begin to operate profitably and eventually effect foreign exchange savings.

Notes the low employment potential but sees backward linkage in forestry operations and forward linkage in the furniture and building industries as increasing employment. Details the poor financial performance of Standard Building Products and gives profit and loss projections estimating an eventual foreign exchange saving of J$ one million per annum if market analysis projection of 13.000 m3 per annum holds good. Recommends quality improvement to be effected by installing surplus screening equipment at main bagasse supplying mill to improve storability and quality of bagasse board; using forest thinnings and wood fibre as raw material during sugar off-season to ensure all-year operation; reducing price to attract consumers and increase profits; short term government support, not continued protection; continuing to operate with resin blending equipment -a compromise between optimal technical solutions and available funds for investment. Includes drawings of suggested restructuring of the plant to reduce lsts.

Presents the findings and conclusions drawn from a survey of the manufacturing sector. Traces its development, considers the effects of protectionism and examines the prospects for export expansion. Observes that import restrictions contributed to the impressive 7 per cent growth during 1950-1973. Believes such restrictions should be lessened and tariff changes introduced to reduce bias against exports. Shows that continued protection after 1978 was poor strategy and mentions other causes of the decline in manufacture. Points out that the domestic and Caricom markets are now saturated. Concludes that there are great prospects for expansion if government's policies become export-oriented.

Focuses on the technical and vocational system of Jamaica and Nigeria outlining the facilities available. Defines productivity as having the following features: efficiency, effectiveness and performance, and suggests that poor industrial productivity can be traced back to poor educational productivity. Staffing, the curriculum and the relationship between education and other systems are discussed, and remedies proposed. With regard to staffing, proposes that: salary imbalances must be redressed; staff should be trained both in technical and pedagogic areas; professional development should be encouraged; periodic exposure to industry for staff; views of staff should be considered; administration should be sensitized to the concept of productivity; and periodical evaluation is needed. With respect to the curriculum, proposals include: localization of the curriculum; the necessity for industrial input, and the establishment of a National Advisory Body for Technical and Vocational Education.

Gives background of industrial development with focus on the role of Government small-scale enterprises. Analyses the number of establishments, levels of employment by enterprise groups and location, structure of the work force, usage of powered machines, level of record keeping and the type of workshop structures. Concludes by outlining the following proposals with respect to policy guidelines; need for greater decentralization of government agencies established to service the small scale enterprises industry; need to consider the question of how to deliver cost effective assistance to enterprises. Recommends that the national institutions with responsibility for technological development be more responsive to the needs and opportunities for the small enterprise sector. To complement this there should be more co-operation between these agencies and those with special concerns to promote small enterprises. Suggests modification of rules being applied by government agencies re record keeping and also intensive training for proprietors in the fundamentals of record keeping. Notes that the policies undertaken should give particular attention to food, woodwork, metalwork and repair enterprises which offer best prospects for expansion. Government should examine possibilities of promoting the apprenticeship system especially among the enterprises identified and also the possibilities which exist for co-operative forms of organizations and community based enterprises.

Deals with training as an important part of the education of managers and emphasises this as a vital means toward the main objective of profitability. Mentions that conventional training is important but that the effectiveness of the manager becomes crucial in terms of the application of this skill to the job situation. Proposes that the development of the manager be related to his role as a utilizer and disseminator of information.

Describes the structure and nature of the industry and suggests reasons why its entry into the export market has been somewhat retarded. States that the furniture industry evolved from small-scale craft production to commercial production during the 1960's and to-date can be classified as comprising a core of 19 major companies with the greatest export potential and over 800 small enterprises which cater for the domestic market: mahogany is chiefly imported from Belize but low cost imported metal and indigenous wicker are also used, design and finish are generally mediocre; and production techniques are inefficient. Contends that the industry's expansion into exports has been retarded because North American markets are not effectively utilized, low quality standards are achieved and inefficient manufacturing techniques help to fetch incompetitive prices. Indicate that if quality and productivity could be improved, jamaican manufacturers would have a definite advantage over foreign competitors in the USA and Canadian markets.

Discusses the performance of the textile industry and sets projection targets for 1978-1982. Lists the different operations of the industry: spinning and weaving; knitting of cotton and man-made fibres; finishing and/or printing of cotton and synthetic fabrics; the eight companies engaged in the different aspects and the capacity of each. Points out that the wide range of fabrics demanded by the trade seriously affected the growth of the industry. Blames lack of raw materials and spare parts, obsolete equipment, increasing competition, shortage of skilled personnel, for poor performance in 1977. Arrives at projections by assuming a 10% annual rise in demand, based on population growth and increased exports generated by the Export Industry Encouragement Law. Says management and technical problems and foreign exchange shortage were considered in setting targets for 1978-82. Shows that new capacity will result from cotton/polyester mill to be in use by 1981. Explains how employment is generated by the industry and shows that the new mill at Ariguanabo will offer much additional employeemnt. Expects better use of capacity and multiple shifts system to increase production. Rationalizing consumption will continue for the domestic market and for the export market only if prices are competitive. Will seek overseas technical assistance to evaluate industry to develop and implement better production techniques, quality control and maintenance procedures, as well as training and upgrading personnel. Recommends a joint public/private sector planning committee to monitor the industry and formulate development strategies.

Report. (Informe). Port of Spain, Government Printery, 1978. 61 p. tbls.

Euric Bobb, Chairman. --Laid before the House of Representatives 1 December 1978.

General (01424)

Total revenues increased at an annual average rate of 54% between 1973 and 1977, enabling Government to reduce non-oil taxes, increase expenditure and build up substantial balances of excess funds. Budgetary policy was geared to establishing a modern industrial sector with the supporting socio-economic infrastructure, while simultaneously improving living standards and moderating the effects of inflation. The fiscal situation is expected to alter: oil revenues will peak in 1980 and decline thereafter, with total revenues increasing at a projected 7% during 1979 to 1983. Government has two alternatives: to continue the strong expansionary thrust or to adopt a more cautious approach. The Committee favours the latter. Recommendations: to create no new welfare services at this time since by 1983, at the present rate of expenditure, such services will absorb a quarter of all revenue; to declare a moratorium on tax reductions; to make a comprehensive review of tax and utility tariff systems in order to ascertain the scope for additional taxation as a precondition to any decision for rapid expandion in its welfare services.

The international recession in the trade has encouraged protectionist policies in the US, Europe and elsewhere. Locally, the trade is a major employer and earner of foreign exchange. Inefficient technology, poor labour relations and lack of aggressive salesmanship are serious handicaps. Short-term recommendations include: substantial management development; improvement of industrial relations; state assistance in training operatives and mechanics; development of functional organizations. In the long term the Commission recommends Government assistance in the following areas: export promotion; technical assistance; continued development and maintenance of managerial capacity. Special attention is paid to the Trinidad Textile Manufacturing Co. Ltd. The Commission recommends that the mill diversify its present produce mix (cotton) to synthetics; that new equipment be installed; that Government carry out market studies to assess demand and mill production.

Analyses the energy consumption pattern in Trinidad and Tobago which has the highest per capita energy consumption in the Caribbean. An assessment of the energy resource data reveals that the country's petroleum industry completely dominates the energy arena, that very little has been done to identify, assess and develop other possible conventional energy resources. In the non-conventional arena, states that solar, wind, wave, biomass and municipal waste, merit the most attention, recommends in the short term that surveys be carried out on energy resources, and consumption and the development and utilization of these resources.

Attributes the drop in the number of students enrolled at the School of Nursing in Port of Spain, San Fernando and St. Ann's to the change in entry requirements and to the protracted recruitment procedures. In 1977 the Nursing Council established five O' levels as the minimum requirement for nurse training. Between 1971 and 1980 there was a net reduction in enrollment from 135 in 1971 to 109 in 1977 to 86 in 1980. The shortfall in the school in 1980 was 520 students and manpower requirements can be met by enrolling 200 persons annually 1984-1988. A lowering of the academic standard would attract a larger number of applicants. Notes that in the UK the national minimum requirement is two O'Levels, recommends lowering the entry requirement and revising recruitment procedures.

The G.C.E., introduced in Great Britain, was designed for grammar schools. It offered a means of securing matriculation and other requirements. As the numbers of students examined grew and the ability range broadened the examination became less and less a fair assessment of students' capabilities. Trinidad, since 1973-1974, has been able to offer free secondary education up to age 16. With great increases in the school population the local experience was similar to that of Great Britain. The so-called "failure" rate reflects the unsuitability of the G.C.E., not the incapacity of teachers, students or community. To provide fair assessment, certification, and the accompanying restructuring of the curriculum, will be formidable; but it is possibly a more urgent task than switching over to the Caribbean Examinations Council A-Level examinations.

Since 1950 the Council has been responsible for the training and certification of nurses, midwives and (since 1968) nursing assistants. Entry qualifications and procedures were under constant review and in 1977 the minimum requirements were upgraded to 5 O'Levels for nursing and midwifery. The memorandum details the curricula and recommended time frame for the completion of courses. These authorities are involved in the selection process -the Council, the Schools, and the Ministry of Health- and the procedure can take as long as two years. To this is attributed the low rate of recruitment, as are the poor facilities for work and study at the hospitals. Civil Service and Nursing Council regulations conflict, and since trainees are subject to both, discipline suffers. Recommendations are made for speeding up the screening process; improvement of plant and facilities; greater autonomy for the Schools.

General (01580)

Reports on the methodology employed and the funding of the Planning Division in its study of the feasibility of importing agricultural labour to relieve the present shortage of the local labour supply. The study called for an examination of the social implications of importation and an understanding of factors influencing the agricultural labour supply. To satisfy the objectives of the study a review of existing data and two field surveys were undertaken. The latter identified a relationship between the supply of labour and wages and the actual hours, suggesting in particular a negative impact of the Development and Environmental Works Division (DEWD) on the agricultural labour supply. The inescapable solution derived from the study is that some solution must be found to make agriculture as equally an attractor of investment and employment as other sectors. States that this can only be achieved in the long term by a revitalization of the sector. Examines the short-term solutions -importation of labour, subsidization of wages, mechanization and disbandment of DEWD- and recommends that DEWD workers be incorporated into a multi-purpose Rural Labour Force and that importation be deferred until the results of a pilot scheme to rationalize DEWD are available.

The proposals of the Rampersad paper (1981) are: closure of Orange Grove and other factories; Caroni Ltd. to be confined to sugar processing; reduction of field and office work force; sugar growing to be done by independent producers. The Union objects to these proposals on two grounds. Better management of existing resources is the solution, not reduced management responsibilities. The proposals do not include suggestions for the relocation of displaced persons, apart from the distribution of 2,000 farms. 10,000-12,000 workers are affected.

Briefly describes the flora of Trinidad and Tobago and the present agro-based industry and summarizes the Research and Development (R+D) programme in natural products. At present, the major part of the funds for R+D in this area is provided by the State and the work is largely executed at CARIRI and UWI. One of the major problem areas relates to inadequate documentation of the national and regional flora. Other constraints to Research and Development are shortage and non-availability of trained personnel, lack of multidisciplinary research teams, the lack of mechanisms for systematically and routinely investigating little-known but potentially useful tropical plants, and inadequate equipment and back-up services. The author recommends expansion of training in tropical botany, horticulture and agronomy, the build up of highly motivated, highly competent research groups and suggests that there be linkages between institutions in developed countries and those in developing countries to overcome these intrinsic constraints.

Emphasizes the decline of plantation agriculture and the importance of small scale independent farming as the basis of agricultural planning in the Caribbean. Notes however that a distinction must be made between the MDC's and LDC's; for the former, programmes would seem to be relatively more important, the stress being on the management of inputs, monitoring, control and evaluation and the development of effective linkages between the various economic institutions. For the latter the project approach is more appropriate and suggests that training should initially be aimed at the planning units.

Surveys nine selected categories of activities and institutions in the Commonwealth Caribbean, which can be conceived as comprising the elements of an emerging employment creation strategy. The categories selected for examination are: more explicit attention to the employment dimension in national and regional economic development planning; vocational education, manpower training and on-the-job training policies and programmes; labour market information and employment service institutions, technological adaptation and intermediate technologies appropriate to labour-surplus small open economies; economically viable cooperatives as labour-intensive alternatives in agriculture, processing and distribution; collective bargaining institutions and practices; programmes for unemployed youth and women, community development programmes of a labour-intensive variety; and measuring, forecasting and policy analysis of intra-regional and regional-metropolitan migration. The survey assesses as far as possible the degree of progress in each category and the problems being encountered. The main conclusion which emerges is that a custodial institution for the region could be profitably created with the overall function of strengthening the elements discussed and of reducing the time for those elements to achieve their fullest effectiveness.

Aims to provide a background against which countries may decide on appropriate exchange rates. Examines earlier works on exchange rate targets and implications and desirable income distribution from these, and ways in which the growth-oriented approach is peculiar to LDCs. Finds the difference between exchange rate policy in MDCs and LDCs to be a combination of structure, policy and time perspectives, and the factors which affect exchange rate policies, to be the strength of trade unions and their policy on wages, politico-economic factors such as strength of government, time horizon of elected governments and the countries external economic relations. Also examines aspects of the international environment which affect exchange rate policy such as events in the rest of the world, the size of international financial flows to LDCs, and the role of international organizations such as the IMF. Concludes that the process of arriving at an exchange rate strategy should be meeting with planners to agree on growth targets and expected foreign exchange requirements, use of a model such as the example used to deduce changes needed to produce desired foreign exchange, examination of solution to see whether these produced the desired effect on income.

Critically examines the assumptions that pure protein deficiency is a major cause of malnutrition and that livestock production and consumption is a nutritional necessity, and asserts that such misconceptions have resulted in policies inimical to the nutritional improvement of at-risk groups. Argues that Caribbean meat consumption is a matter of taste and that substantial evidence links the level of meat consumption with income. An analysis of income trends for developed and developing market economies reveals a widening economic gap between nations and between social classes within nations, suggesting that unless meat becomes cheaper, its consumption will be restricted to the better-off in most countries. Apart from livestock production's inefficient use of land, labour and capital resources, increasing utilization of grain for feed resulting in a competition between poor people and animals for food, ensures that rising grain prices contribute to rising meat prices and decreasing meat consumption by poorer people. Concludes that the case for livestock production currently rests on its provision of jobs and import substitution to maintain the dietary practices of the elites: the decision to develop it should be influenced by social cost-benefit considerations and not the issue of animal protein requirement.

Rome, FAO, 1979. p. 80-97. 4 refs.

Analyses the problems of the small farmer and implications for the implementation of programmes for agrarian reform and rural development. The predominance of small farmers in Latin America and the Caribbean has been attributed to a slow increase in agricultural production and rapid growth in rural population. Lack of incentives has perpetuated an imbalanced agrarian structure. Landless agricultural workers also create problems for agrarian reform. The problems of development programmes may be due to faulty conception, programme planning or improper administration. Recommends identification of constraints inherent in programmes that have only the agrarian sector as target, promotion of other related policies, priority support to strategies that favour capital accumulation in agricultural sectors of national economies.

Deals with the paucity of certified undergraduate programmes in the Social Sciences at the University of the West Indies. Names the few courses, mentions those qualified to take them and shows that they are one-year courses for full-time, two-year for part-time students. Considers the courses general, omitting important topics such as demography, urban and rural planning, public management. Though there is a need, there are no short-term courses lasting 3-84 days. Sees lack of knowledge of the actual needs coupled with shortage of Social Science staff as accounting for the situation, as well as governments' hostility toward Social Sciences. Feels that staff development programmes would remedy the situation. Some short-term courses are being offered by non-university institutions in Barbados and in Trade Union Colleges, and recently international and regional institutions have offered to finance others. Comments that only some aspects of Social Science are being considered; that so many agencies offering courses will be counter-productive and expensive leaving the university programme underdeveloped. Recommends that the Cave Hill campus develop these programmes, given adequate staff. This would be more meaningful than duplicating courses at Mona and St. Augustine and would allow more time for the courses; certification would be by the university giving participants the chance of graduate study if desired; academics should plan the programmes based on regional manpower needs, not on the external environment; implementation should take place before the survey of manpower needs is analysed.

In compliance with Resolution II of the Second Conference of Ministers Responsible for Health.
Restricted (01727)

The aim of the study is to prepare a strategy for the solution of environmental health problems. Submits specific provisions stating aims, objectives and achievement target dates in areas such as water supply, liquid waste and excreta and solid waste disposal, industrial wastes, beach pollution and use of pesticides. Suggests measures that could be taken in relation to the above mentioned areas inlcuding the creation of separate agencies to monitor and regulate environmental health; fixed standards and criteria for the design of water and waste water systems; manpower development and training programmes for all environmental health workers; revision and promulgation of legislation especially in those areas of industrial wastes and use of pesticides. Briefly outlines aims of the Caribbean Environmental Health Institute for the LDC's. Identifies 3 basic conditions which must be fulfilled in order to achieve successful implementation of the strategy purposes.

General (01748)

Views the problem of combined unemployment and underemployment in the Caribbean as part of the closely related and more fundamental problem of poverty and economic and social inequality and examines why the adoption of a "basic needs" strategy of development would contribute to the solution of the latter. Concludes that organized youth movements in the region have an important role to play if they involve themselves in development policy, and if they subject to critical review on a continuing basis, the entire system of education and training, and ensure the educational and training needs for development are adequately met.

General (01770)

The study seeks to identify non-tariff mechanisms for increasing intra-Caribbean trade in agricultural products. It examines the marketing facilities of the Government Corporations and departments and concludes that co-ordination of guaranteed price policies is required. The arrangements for marketing rice and oils and fats illustrates that such agreements can help to expand regional trade. The informal trading activities while large, lack adequate freight facilities. The obstacles to trade include import restrictions, lack of agencies and lack of standardization of products, while food import substitution is proposed as providing a potential contribution to an expansion of intra-Caribbean trade, and rationalization of regional agriculture.

Ideological obstacles to economic development in the English-speaking Caribbean. (Obstaculos ideologicos al desarrollo economico en el Caribe anglofono). 18 p.
General (01773)

The essay posits that the failure of economic policy in the English-speaking Caribbean reflects the substitution of ideology for creative model building in the search for solutions to the region's economic problems. The prevailing ideological model of the region -characterised as a hybrid of the plantation model and the Marxist-Leninist programme of economic management- is critized for having substituted a reactive nationalism for a systematic development of a practical programme of development for the Caribbean. The limitations of ideology as a decision model are: 1) its comprehensiveness - it purports global effectiveness; 2) it selects the problem for the decision-maker; 3) it serves as a filter through which the decision-maker views reality; 4) it is deterministic; and 5) it rules out the possibility of feedback from the real world. Caribbean economists, in their identification of the problem, strategic variables and paramaters have allowed ideological considerations to preclude a systematic approach, creative theorizing and intelligent management. The plea is made for "a return to trials blazed by Lloyd Best in the Sixties" and the resumption of "the search for an original theory of Caribbean development".

Portland Bight oil spill. (Derramamiento de petroleo de Portland Bight). Jamaica Journal (44): 39-45, 1980. maps., illus.

Photographs are used to illustrate the article.
General (01605)

A marine biologist describes in detail an oil spill and the resulting damages which occurred in the Portland Bight area of Jamaica in 1974, as an illustration of the threat they represent to the area. No attempt could be made to control the spill as it was reported too late and the equipment at the disposal of the oil control committee inadequate. He recommends the establishment of National Contingency plans linked to regional plans for control against such spills outside the scope of individual countries. Concludes however that although oil spills continue to be an ever present threat of disaster to marine life the authorities have neglected to make any positive steps toward their control.

Provision of low income housing in Jamaica: an economic appraisal of the Prison Farm and Camplands sites. Experiment in low-income housing in Jamaica; an evaluation. Kingston, UWI. Institute of Social and Economic Research, 1978. p. 29 p.. tbls. 2 refs.

Looks at the strengths and weaknesses of two schemes vis-a-vis cost, construction time, stated goal of the self-help method. Discusses these in four sections: concept and rationale of Sites and Services; proposed strengths and possible weaknesses; examining data from a survey of the sites to compare findings with alternatives; summing up the findings from an economic perspective. Given the current lack of low-income housing, Sites and Services decided to solve the problem with an aided self-help scheme finding it cheaper and capable of generating much employment. Assumed that benefits will be employment, skill training, reduced costs, community development; shows its greatest weakness as the failure to inform participants of rental and poor workmanship caused by poor supervision. Initial financing, not overall cost of the unit, was considered the main advantage of the scheme. 8 3/4 months, 10 months was the average length of time for completion of the houses. Found that the self-help objective was not met, except in two instances. Continuing financing was the most serious problem, solved generally through "partner", savings, credit union loans. Concludes that in terms of providing inexpensive houses the objective was met, though at the lower middle rather than low income level; but self-help and reduction of unemployment were negligible. Recommends for future schemes: making skilled labour available ; offering better quality control and on-site supervision to avoid waste of materials and effort; deciding quickly on a reasonable mortgage payment; keeping costs down so there can be a greater differential between this type of housing and that of the private sector.

Survey of full-time students living off campus. Respondents fell into two broad groups, the larger lived in unpaid accommodation with friends or relatives. Their income was smaller than those in rentals and they were more dependent on parental support. Most lived four miles or more from campus. Those living in rented accommodation comprised a third of all respondents. Most lived close to the campus and their incomes tended to be higher. Scarcity, costliness and poor quality were problems encountered when locating suitable housing. Overall, women had smaller incomes and greater problems, than men. Few of the respondents had found accommodation through University services and some felt that the services should be more active in this area. There is a need for establishing appropriate policies for housing students, and for on-going surveys.

The Central Bank should only lend to aid a bank out of temporary liquidity difficulties, and lending should only be engaged in when credit expansion portfolios are in keeping with the economic policy of the Government. Investors guide to Jamaica. (Guia para inversionistas en Jamaica). Kingston, 1981. 182 p. tbls.
General (01784)

Documents in seven sections the information essential to potential investors in Jamaica. Begins with a brief account of the form of government and the present economic situation and mentions living conditions and social amenities, then surveys briefly the main productive sectors: agriculture, mining, construction, tourism, finance, with a special look at manufacturing, showing how each had performed in the last three years. Section II deals with the investment environment, describing the three forms of legal business in Jamaica - sole proprietorship, partnership, companies incorporated under the Companies Act; the investment policy of the country and the types of taxation. Section III discusses industrial services for investors, in which the role of the banks, the Jamaica Industrial Development Corporation, the Jamaica National Export Corporation, the Jamaica National Investment Company, is treated, as well as the Kingston Free Zone and the activities of the Trade Administrator's Department which handles import licenses. Labour force development, the impact of trade unions, wages and operative labour laws are discussed in section IV implying that investors will find the labour climate advantageous. Other advantages dealt with in section IV are the U.S. and Canadian Generalised Systems of Preference and exporting to the EEC under Lome - all duty free arrangements once established criteria are met. In section V public utilities and infrastructure are treated, detailing such aspects of their operations as would be relevant to the interests of the investor. Nine products: coffee, alcoholic beverages, footware, garment, textiles, electronics, furniture and wood products, are identified as having great potential for export expansion. Profiles of their performance are given in section 7.

The constitution provides that the electorate in each constituency should approximate the total electorate divided by the number of constituencies: thirty-four constituencies in Trinidad, two in Tobago. Constituency boundaries are to be reviewed at intervals not less than two nor more than five years apart. The last review was carried out in 1976. The Commission found that of the 91,878 Port of Spain electors, only 52,265 were within the city limits; of the rest, some were in St. Ann's, some in Diego Martin. The Commission recommends the abolition of three Port of Spain Constituencies -Central, West and North-East; the creation of two new ones- Diego Martin Central and Port of Spain North; splitting St. Ann's into two -East and West. The total number of constituencies remain at thirty-six.

Notes that from childhood Mr. Hudson-Phillips was acquainted with West Indian politicians who visited his home, states that at University in London he was active in students' groups and that in 1966 he joined the PNM government and served as Attorney General 1969-1973. The riots of 1979 are shown as reinforcing his commitment to democracy and to change without violence and also as bringing home to him serious defeats in the government of the PNM, including the failure to root out corruption. States that relations between him and the Prime Minister deteriorated and in September 1973 he resigned. Asserts that the later behaviour of the PNM, as exemplified in the person of the Prime Minister, confirmed a marked decline in the fabric of democracy and an increase in the powers of the leader e.g.: the undated letters of resignation; the Crossing of the Floor bill; the control of special funds; fanning of historical tensions. It is suggested that Parliament is no longer in control of the nation's affairs because it does not control the special funds, all of which are the direct responsibility of the Prime Minister and most of which are invested abroad. Declares that ONR is a truly national party representing everyone. States that PNM's failure to lead is seen in the record of education, agriculture and housing. ONR promises the restructuring of the national educational system, trebling agricultural production in three years; various easements, such as tax reliefs to land tenants and rents paid; distribution of land; eradication of corruption, and the impartial prosecution of offenders; consistent, honest and courageous leadership.

Describes the raison d'etre of the Group of Latin American and Caribbean Sugar Exporting Countries (GLACSEC), a group which is of importance in the field of the world sugar economy since its exports represent 60% of the world total. GLACSEC serves as a consulting and co-ordinating mechanism for common matters relating to sugar production and marketing, assists in the adoption of common positions in negotiations and in international meetings related to sugar and promotes joint action of Member Countries on special sugar issues. Other functions discussed are in the fields of information and technological co-operation. With respect to the latter, eight areas of basic or applied research have been outlined and these form the areas of multinational collaboration. They are: improvement of varieties of sugar cane, methods of cultivation; methods of harvesting; collection and transport, sugar processes; by-product utilization; personnel training; research and information; and economic and or feasibility studies of the sugar industry. GLACSEC's administrative structure is described. General (01599)

Analyses in detail government's projected expenditure for 1979/80-1981/82, presented for approval to the Economic Council. States the total as $2 571 million and says the allocation is consistent with the priorities of the Five Year Plan reflecting efforts to improve productivity and increase efficiency in deploying public investment; financing meets IMF approval. Summarises the programme and explains the allocations: the basic producing sectors -agriculture, manufacturing, mining, tourism receive 35.4%, an increase of 7% over the previous year; economic infrastructure, 54% with housing getting more than 40% of the allocation because the needs are great and the industry must be stimulated; social infrastructure, 9.1%- the hope is that this sector will benefit from any improvement in the economy, the remainder of 1.5% will be spent on general administration. Further details include the distribution of expenditure by form and institution and summary of the allocations to the institutional (funding shared internationally) and non-institutional (funding not shared) programmes. Discusses some changes made to reduce the adverse effects of the drop in real total expenditure. Details the financing of the programme showing that in 1979/80, 28% will come from current surpluses, 41% from domestic borrowing and 31% from external borrowing. Current surplus is projected to increase significantly in the next two years and so lessen the amounts to be borrowed in that period.

Reviews the process of technological development and application in Jamaica and measures the effects of the technological strategies that have been pursued. Evaluates the manner in which the country has sought to provide a supply of and satisfy the demand for technology. Focus is placed on the general features of the systems that have been developed and the forces that have determined the character these systems have assumed. The socio-economic costs of technological dependence were established as follows: the total reliability of the country in the use of foreign production systems hence its growth is heavily dependent on the amount of foreign exchange generated, the importation of technology and material inputs have removed pressure from the Science and Technology system to develop indigenous processes, techniques and implements to devise ways of using locally available raw materials. This serves to reinforce the country's technological underdevelopment and preempts the possibility for generation of increasing value added and employment in the local economy.

Jamaica: radio-broadcasting in national development. (Jamaica: radiodifusion en el desarrollo nacional). 1972. tbls., graphs. 90 refs.
Consists of four fiche.
Limited (01794)

Examines the use of radio-broadcasting by the government over the period 1930-1970 taking as its point of departure the belief of theorists that a positive use of the mass media by the government of a developing country could give added impetus to the process of national development: the study contends that theorists runs the risk of overlooking the unique circumstances in developing countries. The history of radio-broadcasting in Jamaica is sketched and events highlighted are analysed in the light of Jamaica's political social and economic conditions. The study then focuses on the functions and performances of stations ZQI, RJR and JBC and the extent to which they were used by the government. Implicit statements of the government's concept of the role of broadcasting in national development are inferred from the content analysis of government programmes and government's influence on non-reserved broadcasting time. Concludes that government's concentration on publicizing its own accomplishments and promoting social development plans to the neglect of critical economic and political users, was due to the fact that economic control was in foreign hands and to an elitist belief that the complexities of government administration were beyond the comprehension of the masses.

Barbados development plan 1979-1983; planning for growth. (Plan de desarrollo de Barbados 1979-1983; planificacion para el desarrollo). Bridgetown, 1979. 184 p. graphs., illus., tbls.

General (01776)

Reviews economic developments in Barbados during the period 1970-1978 and defines the major objectives of the development strategy for the 1980's as follows: 1) to maximize growth and productive employment opportunities consistent with budgetary and balance of payments constraints and 2) greater economic diversification through continued structural transformation of the economy and the development of a more diversified pattern of production of goods and services. States that these are to be achieved by an economic strategy which will generate a real growth rate of at least 4% per annum during the plan period by means of specific sector projects, and a social strategy which will seek to improve, sustain or expand the delivery of social services through the cost-effective approach: an expansionary employment policy, incomes and prices policies and fiscal incentives which will aim to alleviate the critical problems of unemployment, inflation and the balance of payments respectively. Outlines global and sectoral targets and projections for the period and describes the Public Investment Programme, which envisages expenditure of some $562 million, 57.4% of which will be financed from internal sources with the highest allocation going to agriculture. Sets out the detailed plans and programmes of the productive sectors -agriculture, tourism, industry and energy- and the sectors providing economic and social infrastructure. Describes the administrative machinery of planning, and the action being taken to improve the planning process.

Grenada sugar cane resuscitation project. (Proyecto de revitalizacion de la industria azucarera en Granada). Grenada. Ministry of Agriculture, Forestry and Fisheries, 1977. 13 p.
General (01742)

Presents a project proposal for CIDA assistance in the resuscitation of Grenada's sugar industry. The move to resuscitation was initiated because of the dependence of subsistence farmers on the industry, the failure to find an alternative crop, and economic considerations, namely the industry's contribution to incomes, employment and foreign exchange savings. The general aims are to increase acreage, average yield per acre and output, by desired targets; to increase and improve the processing of sugar cane and its by-products; and to improve the lot of the cane farmer. There have been several achievements to date but the problems at present are, the rate at which the programme can be effected and the limitation placed by financial constraints upon the level of services that can be provided. A grant of EC$2,394,390, in addition to funds from local inputs, is required to institute the following services: fertilizer revolving fund; revolving ploughing programme; pest, diseases and weed control revolving programme; transport and feeder roads; training for farmers; processing facilities; credit; and nursery development. Details of how these will be implemented and financed are provided.

General (01765)

An analysis of the industrial sector in Grenada is situated within the context of the general economic background of the island and the performance of the economy during the decade of the 1970's. A few examples serve to illustrate the present state of industrial activities. Despite some improvements registered over the last few years the manufacturing share of GDP has remained relatively unchanged during the past decade when measured in real output terms. Local industry is primarily geared towards the satisfaction of local consumer demand and is characterized by high import content, high ratio of investment cost per job and ad hoc organization. One of the major constraints to industrial development has been the absence over the last decade of any defined industrial development policy and strategy. The industrial development strategies of the new Government for the decade of the 80's are outlined. A policy of "import-substitution industrialization through the greater utilization of indigenous natural and human resources" will be pursued by means of a more active public sector role in the economy, joint ventures with local and foreign interests and the provision of necessary incentives to the private sector for the pursuit of industrial activities where compatible with the national interest.

A/CONF.100/NR/16
General (01584)

Outlines the primary objectives of Jamaica's energy policy. These are to reduce dependency on imported energy, diversify the present energy supply mix, accelerate explorationfor energy resources and the development of new and renewable energy supplies. An assessment of the possible role of new and renewable energy resources indicates that by the next two decades these could provide approximately 50% of the total energy demand. Summarises and evaluates energy projects initiated since 1979-80. In the long term Jamaica has a variety of options to develop a comprehensive programme and energy mix, these are: solar energy, biogas applications, energy conversion from wastes, biomass, hydroelectricity, solar thermal and ocean thermal energy conversion, wind energy, photovoltaic and geothermal. An economic assessment of these is presented, indicating the immediate requirements for further development. The main constraints in the development of projects are financing, education and training and International Banks acceptance of marginally economic projects. Presents a case for Jamaica as a potential site for demonstration units for ocean thermal and solar thermal energy conversion.

Plan for the development of an Adult Male Corrections system in Jamaica which presents an outline of the system components, costs and timing for development; a discussion of a more detailed description of the component and the supporting graphs and tables. The objectives are seen as human and economic and therefore it concentrates on the human values of rehabilitation and the cost efficiency of this new system. Outlines and breaks down the four major division of the system -preconviction which includes both awaiting trial and appeal; community services, institutional services; and after care. Implementation is influenced by two primary objectives- to rid Jamaica of the General Penitentiary and the St. Catherine District Prison as soon as possible; and to develop without sacrificing offender rehabilitation, a productive dollar returning system. Implementation is processed in three stages: predesign; designs and the production of working drawings and the actual construction. Prescribes as the major features of the system the locating of services including institutional facilities close to the localities in which offenders live; instituting reception and diagnostic centres so as to direct committed inmates to the right programmes and facilities establishing special facility for defectives and the retaining as well of some features of the old system. Concentrates overall on a community oriented rehabilitation programme and the development throughout of incentives to encourage inmates to seek their release.

The general policy of the Government is one of economic diversification. The agricultural sector is identified as the basic and prime sector followed by industry and tourism; the aim is to establish linkages between these sectors to achieve self-sufficiency and import-substitution. Sugar will remain the mainstay of the economy though playing a diminishing role. Industrial development will be based on the encouragement of small and medium scale assembly and manufacturing plants and to this end the Government will continue to grant attractive incentives to the establishment of industries. Tourist development would be directed towards the povision of tourist facilities, increasing to some extent hotel space and doubling the utilization of existing space. The Government plans also to develop a comprehensive health care programme, to improve general housing conditions through new low cost and low income housing programmes and to further infrastructural development.

Discusses the objectives and strategies of development plans in Barbados, Jamaica, and Trinidad and Tobago distinguishing between early development plans and plans of 60's through 70's. The earlier ones tended to be mainly budgetary exercises containing an estimate of the amount of internal revenue and other funds likely to be available and the amounts to be expended on various items. In the 70's the emphasis was placed on objectives such as diversification, and increasing governmental control with mild threats of government intervention into private sector areas to achieve development objectives.

Limited (01495)

Reports on and assesses Dominica's needs especially in the area of low cost housing and agriculture with a view to the disbursement of a TT $12M loan, already approved by Trinidad and Tobago. The Dominican economy declined 1972-1975 but increased 1975-1978, although the 1978 real GDP was still below the 1972 level. This poor performance is attributed to bad weather, culminating in the destruction of agricultural output by hurricanes in 1979 and 1980; industrial unrest; the international recession; and a deteriorating investment climate. The economy is mainly agricultural and the leading export crops are bananas, grapefruit and coconut. Hurricane damage worsened the housing problem and aggravated the related one of the road communications. The team proposes that the loan be applied to building 830 timber housing units; and to agricultural credit for crop and livestock production, repair and construction of roads, for working capital for the marketing board; extension services and farming equipment. Both programmes are for three years. Repayment of the loan in the different sectors vary from eight to forty years. Detailed specifications for a timber housing unit are included.

Off-shore banking (amendment) act, 1980. (Enmienda a la ley sobre los bancos frente a la costa 1980). Bridgetown, 1980. 9 p.
Supplement to Official Gazette dated 7 August 1980.
General (01389)

Repeals, replaces and amends sections of the principal Act. Under the amendment: the act is not applicable to banks licensed under the Banking Act and engaged in off-shore banking with the approval of the Exchange Authority; licences can only be issued to an eligible company or qualified foreign bank, the latter being licensed under the Banking Act or having prescribed minimum capitalization and assets; licences are valid until revoked or suspended but licensees must pay a prescribed annual fee; and licensees are not obliged to publish copies of balance sheets, profit and loss accounts etc., only to forward these to the Minister. A new section provides that the Rate of Interest Act does not apply to a licensee in respect of its business. Consequential amendments are set out in the schedule.

(Proyecto de ley (1981) para la limitacion de alquileres (de casas): titulado una ley para limitar los alquileres de ciertas casas). Port of Spain, Government Printery, 1981. 10 p. (Bill N[4 of 1981).

Legal supplement to "Trinidad and Tobago Gazette" Vol.20, N[72 dated 17 March 1981. First reading in the House of Representatives 11 March 1981.

General (01483)

Draft legislation which establishes a base rent for dwelling houses completed by December 1977, the base rent being defined as the rent that was charged in December 1977 or at the commencement of the first tenancy thereafter. In order to benefit by this legislation the tenant must register his tenancy by a specified date. Notwithstanding this provision, rents paid up to 1 March 1981, even if in excess of the base rent, are not recoverable and the landlord may recover any arrears of rent due at that date. This bill will require a three-fifths majority in parliament.

Foreword by S.S. Ramphal.
General (01442)

Traces the development of the courts, the law and its personnel of Guyana from settlement to 1972. Describes the growth of the country's legal institutions during the Dutch period, the impact of the British conquest in 1803, the gradual subsequent introduction of English concepts and institutions and the ultimate replacement in 1917 of the Dutch law by English law except for a few remaining elements. The wider historical and sociological context is taken into account, and in particular the influence of the plantocracy. It also considers the effect of the country's emergence into independence and of its recent transition to republican status. A bibliography and index are also included.

Jamaica Soya Products Industries: a troubled joint venture. (Jamaica Soya Products Industries: una empresa conjunta en dificultades). Agribusiness Worldwide (Westport, Conn.), 1 (1): 36-41, Sep-Oct 1979. chart., tbls.
General (01774)

Considers the viability of capitalist-socialist joint ventures with reference to the case of Jamaica Soya Industries Ltd. (JSPI) -a joint venture between I.S. Joseph Company (JOSCO) and Jamaica Nutrition Holdings (JNH). Outlines the background to the joint venture agreement of 1974: a soybean crushing plant offered advantage to the island's economy and food goals and would provide a ready market for Jamaica- and CARICOM grown soya, diversify agriculture away from sugar and conserve valuable foreign exchange. Sets out the terms of the agreement which inter alia, established majority equity with the Jamaican Government but retained a fixed crushing margin clause which made JOSCO's approval essential to decisions involving financing, dividends and the hiring of key personnel. By July 1978, JSPI was faced with critical problems due to labour disputes, increasing government involvement in the economy and the unavailability of foreign exchange. Concludes that the Jamaica experience provides four lessons with respect to joint ventures: 1) capitalist-socialist co-operation is possible but profitability is dubious; 2) joint ventures should be designed to militate against overall economic problems; 3) all interested parties should be involved in negotiations at an early date; 4) fixed processing margins should be calculated to include inflation.

Statement made in the House of Representatives on Friday 6th June, 1980.
Limited (01449)

The Law Commission, acting on the recommendation of the Attorney General, prepared draft legislation dealing with land, family law and limitation of action. Some were tabled in January 1980 and the public was invited to make comments before the end of April. Cabinet agreed that the land bills should be tabled and that a Parliamentary Committee should be formed to consider them. The statement further announces the imminent publication of the Revised Laws and proposes a motion that a Joint Select Committee of Parliament be appointed to consider the land bills.

Joint report of Pumping Systems Ltd. and Project Consultants Ltd. of Barbados for National Council for Science and Technology.

Limited (01785)

Stating the current cost of supplying the populations water demand of 26 million gallons per day to be 62.3c per gallon, the report projects a pumping cost of $1.20 within 15 years owing to rising oil prices. Studies of average wind speeds at selected pumping stations during summer and winter are presented and three to five sites are identified as having high potential for wind-powered installations. The structure and efficiency of various wind-mill types is discussed. The windward coast is recommended as the optimum situation for a wind eelctric system for Barbados and a cost analysis calculated at more than 10% per annum as a saving to the economy.

General (01545)

In pursuit of the goals and objectives of the Decade for Women and in accordance with its mandate to ensure the full integration of women in development, the Government of Jamaica's Women's Bureau has developed a variety of projects and programmes beneficial to women. The report presents case studies of three of these: the Women's Centre, the St. Elizabeth Bammy Project and the Sistren Theatre Collective. The Women's Centre, is the first attempt in the Caribbean to deal with the problem of uninterrupted education among young women, due to early pregnancy. The Bammy Project aims at harnessing unemployed skilled resources for cassava processing. The Sistren Theatre Collective uses drama to analyse and comment on the role of Jamaican women, to educate participants as they educate the public and to provide a supplementary income to participants. The report describes the background objectives and work plan of the projects and evaluates their success.

Presents project involving mapping of 12 parish capitals and the urban and sub-urban areas of Kingston and St. Andrew carried out as a result of recommendations by the International Bank of Reconstruction and Development in 1952 undertaking general economic and financial survey of the island to initiate a programme of land revaluation. The Directorate of Colonial Surveys worked in collaboration with the local staff at Survey Department Jamaica in training and aerial photography, first by a pilot scheme in 1953 to test the aplicability of aerial photography to local conditions. As a result, the decision was taken to use photogrammetric survey methods to produce township planimetric maps at a scale of 1:1,250. Field and office checks were made for survey accuracy and conformity to the Registration of Titles Act. The map sheets were finally printed in the United Kingdom, and was the first mapping project involving air survey methods in which Survey Department was engaged, resulting in the gaining of much experience for future projects and very useful maps for the Government and the general public. Included in this presentation are specifications for aerial photography and mapping and a table of costs.

Progress report on a project to build a four-lane, divided highway from the Cocorite Fish Market along the coast line to Wrightson Road at Alberto Street. The contractor, Fujiko Caribbean Ltd. is seriously behind schedule. The main reasons are the breakdown of the dredger, non-availibility of beams and piles, land acquisition problems at the Fish Market and in Mucurapo Road. Completion date is June 1981. No time extensions have been approved.

Progress report on a contract to build a four-lane, divided highway from Wrightson Road at Alberto Street in Port of Spain to the Cocorite Fish Market. Progress has been fair, but not enough to catch up with the schedule: the completion date is 2 June 1981. Property acquisition has been slow enough to be a handicap, as were the delays in relocating WASA equipment and the irregular supplies of cement. Overall progress at December 1980 was 27% and total value of works executed to date, $10.8 M, out of an original estimate of $39.8 M.

The Caroni basin regularly floods, and a study and design for drainage improvements were commissioned. The reasons for flooding in each of four project areas are the same: overflows from the Caroni River and its tributaries; runoffs areas north of the Churcill-Roosevelt Highway; and rainfall. the design proposes the construction of sluice gates and embankments; widening the north-south drains to improve runoff collections; improvement works on the Carib Drain; installation of pumps. Phase I, improvements to Chanka Trace and Sadhu Trace areas, has already begun.

Reports for the year 1973-1979. (Informes para los anos 1973-1979). St. Michael, 1980. 6 v.
General (01725)

The CXC was established under two agreements, signed in 1972 and 1973 respectively by fifteen Commonwealth Caribbean governments. The 1972 agreement set up the Council with representation from the University of the West Indies, the University of Guyana, governments and the teaching profession. The headquarters were in Barbados. Its duties were: to conduct and to review examinations annually; to report to participating governments, to appoint officers and committees for the conduct of its business. The 1973 agreement divided the region into two zones administered severally from Barbados and Jamaica. From the first, the council treated as a priority the replacement of the GCE O'levels by a Caribbean Examinations Council Secondary Education Certificate. Four subject areas were selected to begin the project: Integrated Science, Geography, English and Mathematics. The first examination was held in 1979. Each report briefly describes the work of the CXC; lists members of all committees and subject panels; gives details of staffing; and provides a balance sheet.

Annual report 1978. (Informe anual 1978). Bridgetown, 1979. charts, illus.

Gives Bank's efforts for continued orderly economic recovery. Indicates that Bank's main concern in 1978 was to protect and enhance the balance of payments gains made from the tough monetary measures taken in 1977. These included continued monetary and fiscal restraint assisted by only moderate union wage increases during the year as well as reduced demand for consumer goods; an excellent tourist season and sharply rising manufactured exports. Yet inflation rose over the period as a result of strong pressures in the economies of trading partners, a weakened US dollar and sharp year-end rise in domestic food prices. Report also includes "Prospects for 1979" and the Auditor's Report and Financial Statement for 1978.

Reviews the overall performance of the Bank for the year -this includes management activities- the principal are tourism and industry, with agriculture and fishing being considered. The resources and potential of the Bank are also examined with specific problems being identified, these include unavailability of long term loans for large hotels and export industries without limitations of size - financing for housing and agriculture. Cooperation with other international development banks and commercial banks is emphasised as a means of obtaining loans, etc. Loan regulations and conditions are clearly outlined with consideration being given to the financing of condominiums and whether to concentrate on one type of financing or to keep adding services. Finally, alternatives to the development of the bank's activities are suggested, these include potential foreign investors, town planning and the importance of social and environmental aspects of investments in the economy.

Considers and briefly outlines the economic environment in which the Bank operates and its role in the Barbados economy. Reviews the Bank's activities to date, considers the resources available to it and describes the avenues of possible future action that are being considered. The objectives and guidelines for the financial and credit administration system which will be developed in the future are clearly outlined -these include the Bank's administration of the joint IDB/BDB programme and the BDB programme. It is envisaged that the Bank will seek to reduce the gap between tourism and large manufacturing in the loan portfolio structure- the former account for approximately 75% of the loans and the latter 17%. An analysis of loan activity by sector for the financial years 1970, 1971 are provided at the end of the document.

Given by Mr. D. Seale, Chairman of the Barbados Development Bank on the occasion of the Third Public Annual General Meeting of the BDB at Dover Convention Centre.

Reviews the activities of the Bank for the fiscal year 1978-79, and highlights certain areas of growth and achievement -industrial loans increased from 12-22 and the dollar value moved from $1.5 million to $2.2 million. This increase reflects the Bank's intention to have industrial loans equal to that of tourism, the latter of which normally represents 60% of the Bank's committments. As a boost to local cottage industry it was suggested that passageways in Bridgetown provide sheltered accommodation for vendors. Entrepreneurial development continues to be a priority within the Bank since it serves to create employment. As the Bank's committments continue to increase, and with continued assistance from international financial organizations the bank will continue to play an important part in job creations, economic mobility, and balance of payments benefits as it relates the overall stability of the island.

Annual report 1978/79. (Informe anual 1978/79). Kingston, 1979. 13 p.
General (01653)

Summarises the activities and projects undertaken by the different sections as well as by some officers during the 1978/79 financial year. Considers the "Five Year Development Plan 1978-1982", the major task, as it contained macroeconomic targets, a rolling three-year Public Investment Programme and a summary of the programmes, targets and strategies of the main sectors in the country, including human resources development. States that the annual "Economic and Social Survey" was late because priority was given to the "Plan" and explains the new role of the "Survey" to be an evaluation of the implementationn of the "Five Year Development Plan" including any modifications made each year. States that monitoring the capital budget proposals of the ministries, was initiated and the public investment programme which co-ordinates the budgets of all government bodies including central government, was organised. Reports that certain internal changes were made: the Regional and Social Planning Division was constituted; developing a Manpower Planning, Training and Employment Project co-ordinated by the Agency; removing the Bureau of Regional Affairs to the Ministry of Regional and Parliamentary Affairs and the Economic Stabilisation Unit to the Ministry of Labour as the Wage Monitoring Unit. Lists the varied activities of the Chief Technical Director and details the tasks of the separate divisions of the Agency: Macro-economic and Manpower; Regional and Social; Sectoral; Technical Assistance; including any new features, any seminars and courses organized or attended. Concludes by mentioning modest improvement of personal emoluments to retain senior staff and stating goals for ensuing year. Monitoring public sector performance, through evaluation of capital budget exercise to see if any improvement resulted; constructing a macro-economic model to enable government to analyse reactions to its policies and predict economic performance to guide budgetary and foreign exchange decisions were major projects undertaken.

Incorporated in Trinidad and Tobago, the company's principal activity is providing external telecommunication services, including telephone, telegraph and telex. Profit for the year was $11.9M before tax; the after-tax sum will be divided between the two shareholders under an agreement between the Government of Trinidad and Tobago and Cable and Wireless (WI) Ltd. During the year the company instituted a telex agency and direct dialling for cash calls to US and Canada. Satellite and terrestrial circuits to US, Canada, UK, Venezuela and the WI were activated although one to Grenada was deactivated in the course of the year. The report includes brief accounts of projects underway, staffing, conferences, list of board of directors.

The GDP increased from 11.1% in 1978 to 31.7% in 1979 and remained at 28.6% in 1980. The 1979 increase is substantially due to oil export price increases. The non-oil sector also expanded rapidly, showing an overall growth rate of 23.5% of which the largest part was due to manufacturing, construction, transport, storage and communication. Nevertheless, the fall in productivity in some sectors -crude oil, food, cement, consumer durables- suggests that the real value added has changed little and the expansion is mainly due to price increases. Unemployment in 1979 was 10.2%. 1980 figures are not available but indications are that unemployment will continue to drop. Inflation rates increased from 14.7% (1979) to 17.5% (1980): mostly because of price increases in food, transport, housing. Government's fiscal operations showed a surplus of $272 M principally through the buoyancy of current revenues, especially oil. Commercial banks' lending was constrained by a marginal reserve of 15% imposed by the Central Bank in an effort to reduce non-productive personal expenditure; and by tight liquidity resulting from slow growth of deposits and high loan demand. Non-demand finance houses' deposits increased by 42.7%. Foreign reserves in December totalled $6,491M. The financial operations of the Central Bank generated a surplus of $192M, put into the Consolidated Fund.

To question 58, relating to the appointments of Guidance Officers in schools, the reply is that 20 officers are attached to 18 Junior Secondary Schools and 2 Senior Comprehensive Schools. The programme comprises educational, personal/social and career guidance and counselling services. Question 59 deals with the management of Senior Comprehensive Schools. Cabinet, in August 1980, agreed to the departmentation of these schools, which makes the provision of new posts necessary. Question 60 is not answered on the ground that it is predicated on a false assumption: the failure of the all age Comprehensive School system.

The Commission is a body responsible for the recruitment, appointment and discipline of public servants. During 1976-1980 it was unable to satisfy the demand for technical and professional staff; partly because of the world-wide shortage of skills but the attractiveness of opportunities in the private sector is stressed. Briefly covers procedures for recruitment, appointment, transfers and promotion. Describes the procedures for handling disciplinary matters. On evaluation, the system is clumsy but indispensable, as it protects the employees' rights of appeal. To improve matters, a Disciplinary Tribunal was appointed in 1980. The structure and functions of CARICOM and its affiliated institutions are described. Objectives and functions include integration of member states through the Common Market, the coordination of foreign policies and functional co-operation. Benefits for Guyana are outlined in terms of the potential usefulness of the three objectives and especially the Common Market. Problems of inadequate technical and technological expertise, insufficient storage and transport facilities, shortage of managerial skills are reviewed, and the need for regional co-operation is stressed. The potential net benefits from participation in CARICOM are seen as positive for Guyana.

Experiment in low-income housing in Jamaica; an evaluation. Kingston, UWI. Institute of Social and Economic Research, 1978. p. 33 p.. diags., tbls. 8 refs. (01611)

Looks at patterns of urban squatter behaviour by examining the impact of an upgrading programme on local associations in two urban squatter communities -Drewsland and Cockburn Pen- to see if upgrading has affected their role significantly. Refers to assumptions that community organizations will atrophy after a certain level of development is reached, or that improvement of infrastructure can generate positive interest in local association and finds that the important exercise is to consider the factors likely to influence growth or decline of local associations. Discusses the background of the communities being surveyed and formulates the hypothesis that upgrading has positively affected the organizations and helped to improve their image. States that politically affiliated associations organize and perform many social functions for their communities. Hence there should have been co-operation between these bodies and the authorities, in the upgrading project. In Drewsland this was so, in Cockburn Pen, only marginally so and after protest. Found that residents reaped few benefits from the scheme; did not see improved infrastructure as a benefit. Associations will remain viable as long as they are seen to assist members and provide community facilities and the community remains loyal to the government party. Since the upgrading, more people are joining the associations with males showing greater participation. While there is little difference in the level of membership of employed and unemployed, it is noted that in Cockburn Pen membership is higher among the young; vice versa in Drewsland. Leaders are now more readily identified. Concludes that these are two vibrant communities with positive attitudes, where local associations, though political, are actively serving the residents.

Experiment in low-income housing in Jamaica; an evaluation. Kingston, Institute of Social and Economic Research, 1978. p. 22 p.. tbls.

Presents some data gathered from a survey of participants, already resident, in two self-help housing scheems to determine if the schemes have satisfied their expectations. Benefits of the schemes, management and technical services, implementation strategies, levels of satisfaction, were the criteria applied. Most participants felt that the lower cost and flexibility of design attracted them to the scheme. Though many participants in one scheme were satisfied with the quality of the technical assistance, overall this proved unsatisfactory. Theft and shortage of materials, poor workmanship, finance, were the problems experienced, leading to the observation that better training and advisory services must be given in future schemes, For financial reasons many houses were occupied before completion; this was part of the arrangement. Too many modified the original design at great cost to themselves. Suggests that hereafter land be made available to those with ability to build and others given finished units. There was general satisfaction with the schemes though siting of the bathrooms, poor drainage and plumbing, cracks in walls, met with diapproval. Delay in deciding on mortgage payments is likely to be a serious problem. Concludes that most objectives have been satisfied thus showing that the self-help method of providing low-income housing can work.

General (01604)

Describes the work done in examining marine life in Kingston harbour, tracing the growing interest from cataloguing and identifying organisms to the founding of a biological laboratory at Port Royal. Concentrates on environmental studies in Kingston harbour and environs and fisheries biology. Reports the results of some of the early activities: survey of bottom dwelling fish, other bottom dwelling organisms and of the mangrove areas; discovery of high levels of organic production, with a dangerous lack of oxygen at the bottom of the harbour, which seems to have depleted the original fish stock, highlighting the need for proper management, intensive studies of the oxygen budget and continued monitoring of physico-chemical and biological conditions of the harbour. Other activities included studies of the population structure, abundance and biology of deep water and reef dwelling fish, distribution of larval fish, the origins of reef fish in Jamaica. Suggests as topics for further study: continued monitoring to include areas such as Montego Bay, Ocho Rios, Black River; expansion of fisheries research; physical and chemical oceanography, productivity studies; the deep sea and its resources; an overall study of Portland Bight, an embayment next in importance to Kingston. Considers that the government through the Resource Conservation Authority, should be responsible for most of this research. Outlines a plan for the development of Portland Bight, to be undertaken by the university, aimed at determining its potential for food production; studying the environment to assess the possibilities for urban and industrial development. Sets out the training and funding needs for these projects and the estimated costs, using 1974 prices. Includes descriptions of the marine laboratories at Port Royal and Discovery Bay.

The section on Statutory and Government Services is subdivided into Community Development, Children's Services, Youth Services, National Family Planning Board, National Volunteers, Probation Service, Public Assistance, The National Insurance Scheme and Central Emergency Committee; another on Specialised Health and Welfare Services, and another on Training. Outlines the origin, historical development, purpose, organizational structure, activities and services offered, leading personnel and location of the associations and agencies. Describes the Council of Voluntary Social Services which serves the voluntary organisations in areas of conferring, united action, training, importation and interpretation of the Social Services and liaison with the Government. Concludes by noting the inadequacy of the existing social services in both numbers and urban/rural dispersal.

Provisional instructions for the 1/2,500 cadastral survey of Jamaica. (Instrucciones provisionales para el estudio catastral de 1/2,500 de Jamaica). Kingston, Survey Department, 1950. 1-13 tbls.
General (01603)

Instructions of surveyors engaged in cadastral survey work. Three reasons for which survey plans scale 1/2,500 are required are: for recording property boundaries; illustrating existing detail for administrative and other purposes; planning of layouts and engineering schemes. Four operations were outlined for completing a cadastral survey: 1. the survey should be tied into the triangulation network, 2. all details are to be surveyed and recorded in field books; 3. plotting should be done immediately after surveys and 4. plans should be examined and field checked. Documents kept as reference, should be indexed, continually revised and properly stored. Glossaries and lists are included.

General (01613)

States that three-dimensional models of serving portions of foods can be effective tools in nutrition education. Cites the advantages of using models, mentions favourable reactions of groups surveyed, points out the need to know raw weights of serving portions so as to make models realistic. Lists materials used as clay, papier mache, modelling glue and describes the method employed. Suggests groups that could make models and the correlation of model making with other subjects. Includes a booklet on portion control. Concludes that using this teaching method should be widely projected and recommends that this information be given to interested groups.

Implications for rural development from a long-range planning model: an illustration for Jamaica. (Consecuencias de un modelo de planificacion a largo plazo sobre el desarrollo rural: un ejemplo para Jamaica). Washington, D.C., 1974. 68 p. tbls. Presented to: West Indies Agricultural Economics Conference, 9, Kingston, JM, 2-10 Apr. 1974. 10 refs.

General (C1703)

Shows how the interaction of demographic, social and economic variables can be integrated and used for rural development planning. Begins with the causes of rural poverty and points out the dependence of developing countries on the rural sector. States that 60% of world population is dependent on rural agriculture; the sector is a major source of food production which can generate savings in foreign exchange, a reservoir of surplus labour, a market for capital and consumer goods. Some factors hindering rural economic growth are high population increase with low employment, capital -labour ratios, and skill levels. Rural development must therefore be emphasised to prevent deteriorating social services and urban unemployment resulting from rural migration. Reviews briefly the history of demographic- economic growth models, particularly LRPM2 developed to help countries quantify their national perspective plans. It includes demographic and social service submodels useful for simulating rural -urban migration and projecting population growth as well as trends in education, health and housing requirements and costs. Details the mechanism of LRPM2 and its eight submodels illustrating how each submodel can be used independently or, the output from one can be input for the next. Takes two population growth projections for Jamaica -one slowly increasing, the other rapidly- for the period 1965-2015 and uses the LRPM2 and its submodels to demonstrate the effects of rapidly declining population growth in this time. Rural migration will slow down, education needs will be reduced to 40-60% of requirements of a slowly declining population; health consumers, housing needs and costs, food consumption will be greatly lessened. Population decrease will improve employment opportunities, generate better income and reduce the costs of agricultural infrastructure. Concludes that rapid population growth has a negative effect on rural development, therefore there should be a systematic approach to planning for the rural sector.

Designed for a three-year course, this curriculum is based on the Council's syllabus of subjects for the certificate in General Nursing. It is the work of the Core Curriculum Committee with a PAHO/WHO area adviser as consultant. Nursing is seen as a profession which gives preventive, promotional, diagnostic, therapeutic and rehabilitative care. Nursing education is a dynamic process by which the learner is stimulated to acquire the knowledge, skills and values in order to assume the responsibilities of a registered nurse. Throughout the syllabus, attention is paid, in turn, to the individual, the family and the community and to the inter-relationship of these concepts.
